GET TO KNOW YOUR POLICEMEN

The monthly meetings with the Metropolitan Police officers who are assigned to Scout Car 80 and patrol your neighborhood 24 hours a day are held the third Monday of each month. Watch for notices at your apartment buildings.

These meetings are designed to enable the officers to get to know the people who live and/or work in their patrol area, and to discuss any police problems in that neighborhood.

ECUMENICAL PALM SUNDAY SERVICE AT WASHINGTON CIRCLE MARCH 26

The fifth joint Palm Sunday Blessing of the Palms, at which members of the various churches in the West End and Foggy Bottom will participate, will be held at Washington Circle on Palm Sunday, March 26, at 10 A.M.

The half-hour service is preceded by the procession of congregations from the nine participating churches in the area, marching with palms, flags and banners and led by the ministers and choirs of the churches, which are members of the West End Laymen Association.

The customary blessing of the palms will be performed by the Most Rev. John S. Spence, Auxiliary to the Archbishop of Washington and pastor of St. Stephen Martyr Roman Catholic Church. A brief address will be delivered by the Rev. C. Stewart McKenzie of Western Presbyterian Church. Other participants include the Rev. John E. Schramm of the Community of Christ, the Rev. Andrew K. Meader of Union United Methodist Church, the Rev. Herbert Meza of the Church of the Pilgrims and the Rev. Jerry A. Moore, Jr., D.C. City Councilman and pastor of the Nineteenth Street Baptist Church.

Musicians and trumpets will accompany the combined choirs in leading the audience rendition of traditional hymns.

Those attending are invited to go to the various churches at the close of the service for further worship. If weather is inclement, services will be held in Lisner Auditorium, George Washington University, 21st and H Streets.

JERGEN WEBER AND HIS BAND

The Kennedy Center, on the rim of Foggy Bottom and the margin of the Potomac, begins to settle into the scheme of things in our community. The building, for the most part, one can look at and understand; better, perhaps, by night than by day because the lighting of the outside is subdued and subtle, enhancing the favorable aspect of its shapes and lines, especially at a distance when the Center can be seen as a whole.

Many visits have made familiar and pleasant the flow of the river and the variety of the Virginia shore from the west terrace. This is the place for the person afoot—a leisurely stroll and an unobstructed view of the riverscape, island and bridges restore the feeling of distance and uncluttered spaciousness cities tend to lack.

The east terrace is full of business, with cars, cabs, buses, and people afoot moving about on the generous esplanade. To the east of this is another wide foot-paving backed by two groups of tall shrubs. There is in each cluster of shrubbery a long bronze in high relief by the sculptor Jurgen Weber. It is not easy to find a context in which to place their subject matter. Perhaps they are a kind of allegory. But how does one "read" them? Are they sequential? Does one read them from left to right or right to left or from the middle outward to the ends or from the ends inward to the middle? At night the raking light on them provides a more decorative presentation.

Has the artist given his works an ambiguity purposefully or do they make a statement "loud and clear"? Will you write or telephone me your ideas and opinions?

MEET YOUR OFFICERS

Executive Board member Leslie Jane Wilder has edited the Foggy Bottom News for the past two years. During the 1970-71 season she also served as Secretary of the Foggy Bottom Association.

A native of Massachusetts, she came to Washington in 1963 and to Foggy Bottom in 1967.

Following graduation from the University of Massachusetts, where she received a B.A. degree in English, she worked in Maine in radio and television. Her Washington employers have included the Peace Corps headquarters and the Commerce Department, where she is presently a Public Information Specialist for the United States Travel Service. There, her assignment is to encourage foreigners to visit the United States and help decrease our balance-of-payments deficit. On vacations she, alas, undoes much of the effort by traveling in Mexico, Italy, Scandinavia or other favorite places.

In her free time, when not editing the News, she can often be found reading—preferably Graham Greene or contemporary American writers—or attending modern dance performances at the Kennedy Center.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

A letter from Cody Pfanstiehl, director of the Office of Community Services for the Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority, informs us:

"Please be assured that trees and shrubs will definitely be replaced and the small triangular park at 24th and Eye Streets will be fully restored after Metro construction in this area. The Washington Metropolitan Area Transit Authority has a firm agreement with the National Park Service in this regard for all park areas temporarily disturbed by construction.

"This portion of Metro, which includes the Foggy Bottom Station deep under Eye Street between 23rd and 24th Streets, is due to be completed in June of 1974. By—or perhaps before—that time the park will be restored. Its hiatus will have made it possible for 170,000 passengers a day on this line to travel quietly and swiftly under the park, not on the streets, making the city a more pleasant place to live in.

"Still on the subject of trees, we thought you'd like to know that some 18 plum trees removed from along the construction route in the vicinity of George Washington University have been transplanted on the GWU campus, most of them near Calhoun Hall."

Soupcon *

by Dorth Arnold

We are traveling in Central and South America and I hope to bring home some unusual recipes. Here there are many fruits and vegetables such as zapote and mamé which we don't have in our markets, but I believe we can use substitutes to adapt their recipes. For instance we had a delicious manioca casserole which probably could be made with squash or grits.

With a Spanish-English dictionary at hand I have been reading recipes. Some of the literal translations are funny - to stir-fry chopped onions in oil is "Sal-tearlas en acite." It means to make the onions jump around in oil!

Are you willing to try a recipe for Pastel de Puerros? I warn you that I haven't made it yet and the mode of making the dough is unusual to say the least. But it does sound rich and good. Buen suertel!

* Pastel de Puerros - Leek Pie

Pastry	Filling
3 cups flour	1 bunch of leeks
1 t. baking powder	4 T. flour
1/2 t. baking powder	2 cups milk
1/2 cup oil	salt, pepper, nutmeg
1/2 cup hot milk	1/2 cup grated cheese
	3 eggs
	1/2 cup oil

Make the pastry by putting the milk to boil together with the oil. Put the flour, baking powder and salt in a bowl. Add the boiling oil and milk to the flour and beat with a wooden spoon until well blended and smooth. Cover and set aside while you prepare the filling.

Cut the white part of the leeks in small slices and fry in oil until soft. Add the flour and mix well, then add the milk, stirring rapidly. Let it cook for a few minutes, then remove from the fire and add the beaten eggs. Reserve 3 T. of the eggs to be brushed on the finished pastry before baking. Season with the salt, pepper and nutmeg and stir in the grated cheeses.

Divide the dough in half and roll out very thin. Place half in a buttered pie dish. Pour the filling onto the crust and cover with the other half. Prick the top with a fork and brush with the reserved 3 T. of beaten egg.

Bake in a 350 degree oven about one hour or until the custard is set.

WHAT DID YOU SAY?

The human condition is the name of the game. To fully implement this game plan, we must have the visceral feeling that this is a gut issue. Our hang-ups will not buy time for us in this mix. A think-tank of un-co-opted personnel is necessary to prevent loss in credibility of the status quo. It calls for all the clout possible to maintain our posture in what has become a politically sensitive area.

The thought has begun to surface that the feedback does not have the capability to turn people on sufficiently to assure that the credibility of the thrust won't be bombed out. If that's so, we must get people hooked on other inputs so they won't be turned off.

BTW

HE SLEPT IN FOGGY BOTTOM, TOO

Holding on to the sidewalk railing of the eastern approach to the Whitehurst Freeway, our coattails flapping from the speeding cars and trucks, my companion pointed south into space, "That's where it was, that's where he often visited and slept." The location indicated was twenty feet or so up in the air and I was about to show my incredulity when he continued, "There were two three-story-and-attic brick houses built at 2618-20 K Street, N.W. by Robert Peter, the first mayor of Georgetown, for his children. In 1795 his son, Thomas, married Martha Parke Custis, granddaughter of Martha Washington, and Peter senior gave the house to Thomas at that time.

"On his visits to the city General Washington often spent the night with the Peters when he came up from Mount Vernon. The last time he spent the night in Washington City before his death he stayed at 2618 K Street, N.W., at least that was the twentieth century street address of the Peter house.

"It was demolished in 1960-61 to make room for the highway."

I now understood why he was pointing into thin air. Not even the ghost of the house, not even a simple marker on the railing to show where a bit of national and of Foggy Bottom history had been turned to rubble. He continued, glaring into the void, "They knew what they were doing—the highway department—there was even a D.A.R. bronze plaque on the front. But highways don't care about residents, people or history." He paused as an especially noisy tractor-trailer thundered past whirling the junk and trash from the unswept street over us. As the din diminished he added, "President John Adams was entertained in Thomas Peter's house in June of 1800 and the British minister to the United States took up residence there in 1803."

We stood and stared a little longer and saw the orange colored pagoda of Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge in the distance. We turned and walked eastward on K Street towards the circle which had been named for the man who had visited the grandchildren many times in the now non-existent house.

REMEMBER, YOU SAW IT HERE FIRST

Observant readers of the FBNews noticed that we scooped The Washington Post with our write-up last month of Dirck Holscher, FBA Executive Board member and George Washington University law student, and the attempt he and other students are making to alter the GW master plan.

In The Washington Post of February 26, Wolf Von Eckardt's City scape, headlined "A Plan to Abandon the City," took the University to task for "going into the real estate business."

Pointing out that the University's new master plan calls for "the destruction of most of the Victorian townhouses, old dormitories, apartment houses and neighborhood stores that give Foggy Bottom its easy, small-town charm and the campus its lively urbanity," Von Eckardt complains that "about half of the proposed agglomeration of concrete boxes are either high-rise parking garages or large office-type structures" to be leased out.

Outlining the proposed construction in more detail, he calls it "as unnecessary as it is sad... this sorry fancy of cost-benefit minds who would thus turn tax-exempt higher education into profitable real estate speculation."

Since GW intends to build no new dormitories, and is expected to phase out the few presently in operation, the proposed parking garages stand little chance of alleviating the present parking crisis.

To quote Mr. Von Eckardt again, "the last thing we need south of Washington Circle is another commuter college which, Metro or not, will only add to the automobile congestion."

Let's each of us express our feelings on the matter by writing to Mr. Von Eckardt, c/o The Washington Post, 1515 L Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005; the Hon. Lloyd Elliott, President, George Washington University, Washington, D.C. 20006; or Mrs. Elizabeth Rowe, Chairman, National Capital Planning Commission, 1325 G Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20576.

FIRST ANNUAL FOGGY BOTTOM ART SHOW TO BE HELD APRIL 30

The recent announcement of a First Annual Left Bank Art Show and Wine Tasting Event, to be held on Sunday, April 30, has brought a flurry of response from area residents who want to display their handiwork and talent.

Judging from the sign-ups, it should be a colorful event. The painters who will be there work in quite a variety of styles and techniques—and some have promised to offer a selection priced for quick sale.

Among the crafts, there will be examples of crocheting, needlework and photography. The St. Mary's Play School mothers have reserved a double space for the sale of craft items and fresh-from-the-oven health-food baked goods, with profits going toward the purchase of new equipment for the school.

The show will be held on the vacant lot at 2405-7 Eye St., with wine tasting and music in the adjacent patio of the William Simon's. It should be a fun event. Plan to come and browse in a pleasant Parisian atmosphere, chat with friends, sip some wine, and maybe even buy a painting or two.

If you'd like to display your own work—there's still time to sign up. The fee is only $5. Don't delay, or you may miss out. Call Mrs. William Simon, 333-7514, or Dennis Williams, 337-3275.

LAST MEETING

The evening's speaker, Mr. Thomas Airis, Director of the D.C. Department of Highways and Traffic, spoke briefly about the outlook of the Department for "balanced transportation" in the metropolitan area and the connecting suburbs. He made a point of informing the group that the coming METRO will handle the movement of people, but it cannot handle related problems, such as movement of food and merchandise, police or hospital calls, or other kinds of services which can be handled only by surface transportation. He pointed out the number of cars using the existing freeways, and that three new freeways are scheduled to open in the coming year—Southeast freeway to Anacostia; Ninth Street Freeway; and the Central Freeway. These freeways will support a balanced bus transportation system such as is presently in use on the Shirley Highway in northern Virginia, which Mr. Airis indicated presently carries upwards of 800,000 passengers a day.

Mr. Airis spoke of the need to revitalize the existing "rails" for commuter lines from Maryland and Virginia points. Before the meeting opened to questions, Mr. Airis stated that a Design Hearing would be scheduled in late spring at which time the National Capital Planning Commission would present its views on the Three Sisters Bridge, Dulles Airport Access Roads, I-66 and I-266. The FBA will be notified of the schedule of these meetings.

Among the problems brought to Mr. Airis' attention were, access to Rock Creek Park from Virginia Avenue; the parking problems in the area; the lack of a playground and the obvious need for one; and several related subjects concerning stop signs, traffic lights, and the removal of the objectionable sign on the freeway adjacent to the Kennedy Center.

Mr. Jack Hartley, Deputy Director to Mr. Airis, showed slides of projections for transportation in the District, and suggested that any resident of Foggy Bottom having a traffic-related problem telephone 629-3466.

Captain E. W. Garner of the Second District asked if there were any problems in the neighborhood that he should know about, and said that in the future the Police Department would schedule its monthly meetings for area residents on another evening of the month, not in conflict with the FBA meetings.

PROMENADE

Spring is arriving, the sap is running, the blood is quickening and the outdoors stirs us from our winter sloth. In Foggy Bottom a pleasant custom can be begun—the Promenade—singles, couples, families, groups strolling on the least traveled streets of the Bottom, meeting old friends, making new ones.

The street most free of traffic is 26th which can be reached from Virginia Avenue by the walk along the highway wall and by Eye and K Streets. On 26th Street we have houses on one side, park on the other between Eye and K and very few moving vehicles.

Let's try it on the Saturday and Sunday after you read this—between 3 and 5 in the afternoon. If weather forbids, then the next week.
